

- Trail, mainly for bicyclists but also used by pedestrians
- About a quarter mile in length
- Cost $353,000
 - Funding Sources: Ohio
 Department of Natural Resources, Cedar Fairmount
 Special Improvement District,
 City of Cleveland Heights,
 NOACA

County: Cuyahoga

- This trail was first planned about 10 years ago, just as the financial crisis hit.
- The trail connects the Heights to University Circle, which has some of the highest rate of job growth in Ohio and some of the most excellent arts, education and medical institutions in the world.

This makes it easier to use bicycles or walking to get to jobs or attractions in University Circle. Bicycling and walking are nonpolluting. Unlike cars, they avoid spreading tiny particles in the air that cause asthma in children. Almost anyone can afford a bicycle! The trail helps people get to jobs and entertainment.

At its end, the Cleveland portion of the trail connects to the Lake-to-Lakes Trail and to pathways leading to the bike lanes on Euclid Avenue. These trails and lanes, separate from car traffic, make it safer to use bicycles to get to downtown Cleveland or Lake Erie.

• Though not yet finished, the trail is already being used by enthusiastic bicyclists and pedestrians.

